This is an example of a Notary Certificate version that would be appropriate for Florida, please note that you do not want to have the drivers license to be used as identification here, you want "personally known" so it's best to use a notary that you know to do that.

If you must use the drivers license as ID, but the state you get this notarized in does not mandate that you write that out on the document, does it really matter? In other words, if it doesn't show on the face of the document that you used drivers license, then is it really too big a deal? That is your call... if you can get a notary to see your WSI ID or Affidavit of ID that is great. If you have a college/student ID or employee ID from work, or a variation of these, then use that if possible.

This section is also for the notary to fill out but I filled it in here as an example to show you one way it may be filled in by them when you show them your multiple forms of ID without using a drivers license (a Department of State issued Passport as an American National is a great form of ID to use as alt. to drivers license)
